

Průběh obhajoby bakalářské práce:

After a presentation of Robert Owens' commune living theory Dorothy Day's Catholic Worker party efforts as well as the South American liberation theology in theory and practice as presented by Gutierrez, Miss Plešingrová answered the question by the apponent concerning the Puritan view vs. Brook Farm views of religion as represented by Nathaniel Hawthorne's satirical novel A Dithedale Romance. Miss Plešingrová next addressed the question raised by her supervisor regarding the absence of formal religious educational requirements for his theory of improving and reforming society and what her own opinion to that notion was. The concluding statements by Miss Plešingrová demonstrated her own personal interest and some self-development after reading and analyzing these movements since she has herself taken part in reforms of a similar nature to those she analyzed.
